	This course	Internation	al Manners	1			igned to provide

This course, International Manners and Etiquette, is designed to provide an in-depth and critical exploration of global etiquette practices and intercultural protocols through a structured combination of lectures, case studies, and guided discussions. Delivered entirely in English, the course adopts an EMI (English as a Medium of Instruction) approach, not only to enhance students' academic and professional English proficiency but also to simulate real-world international communication contexts.

In today's increasingly globalized and interconnected world, the ability to navigate social and professional interactions with cultural sensitivity has become an indispensable skill across disciplines and industries. Etiquette, far from being a superficial set of rules, reflects deeply rooted cultural values, historical traditions, and socio-political dynamics. Misunderstandings or breaches in etiquette can lead to communication breakdowns, reputational harm, or even the failure of international collaborations. Thus, this course aims to cultivate in students a critical awareness of cross-cultural differences in manners and protocols, fostering both intellectual empathy and practical competence. The first half of the course provides a comprehensive overview of international etiquette protocols. Topics include diplomatic and business etiquette, formal and informal social behavior, greeting customs, dress codes, dining etiquette, gift-giving practices, and communication styles in diverse cultural contexts. Students will analyze key frameworks such as Hofstede's Cultural Dimensions and Edward Hall's High- and Low-

Context Communication Theory to better understand how cultural

The second half of the course takes a more focused and comparative values manifest in behavior and expectations.

教學目標 Teaching Objectives approach by examining the etiquette norms and sociocultural idiosyncrasies of specific countries or regions. Case studies will be drawn from a range of cultural spheres including East Asia, the Middle East, Europe, Africa, and the Americas. Through these focused explorations, students will develop a nuanced understanding of how history, religion, politics, and societal structures shape etiquette practices within particular cultural contexts. This approach encourages students not only to recognize difference but also to critically engage with the reasons behind such differences, fostering intercultural respect and adaptability. Pedagogically, the course emphasizes active learning through interactive discussions, role-playing simulations, intercultural dialogue, and reflective assignments. Students are encouraged to draw upon their own cultural backgrounds and experiences to enrich classroom dialogue and deepen mutual understanding. In addition to scholarly texts, authentic materials such as video clips, news articles, and guest speaker presentations will be utilized to bridge theory and real-world application. Upon successful completion of the course, students will have developed the knowledge and skills necessary to behave appropriately in diverse intercultural environments, avoid common cross-cultural pitfalls, reduce the risk of miscommunication, and engage respectfully and effectively with individuals from a wide range of cultural backgrounds. The course ultimately seeks to produce globally competent individuals who are equipped to thrive in complex international settings with both confidence and cultural intelligence.

Upon successful completion of this course, students will be able to:

(ILOs)

- Critically analyze the role of international etiquette as a form of intercultural communication and social regulation, identifying how etiquette practices are embedded in cultural, historical, and sociopolitical contexts across different global regions.
- 2. Demonstrate advanced awareness of cross-cultural differences in social behavior, communication styles, and value systems, and apply this understanding to navigate complex intercultural interactions with sensitivity and appropriateness.
- 3. Evaluate and interpret theoretical models of culture and communication, such as Hofstede's Cultural Dimensions and

- Hall's Context Theory, to explain variations in etiquette and behavioral norms among societies.
- 4. Effectively apply appropriate international etiquette protocols in both professional and social contexts, including greetings, introductions, gift-giving, business correspondence, and formal dining, demonstrating cultural fluency and adaptability.
- 5. Compare and contrast the etiquette norms of selected countries or regions, identifying both universal principles and culturally specific practices, and articulating their implications for international collaboration and diplomacy.
- 6. Synthesize personal experience, theoretical insight, and empirical observation to engage in critical reflection on one's own cultural assumptions and behavioral tendencies in intercultural settings.
- 7. Communicate complex ideas and cultural insights with clarity and academic rigor in English, through both oral presentations and written assignments, demonstrating proficiency in English for academic and professional purposes.
- 8. Design context-sensitive strategies to prevent intercultural misunderstandings and manage etiquette-related challenges in globalized workspaces or multicultural social environments.

Through this course, students will cultivate the following key competencies:

- Critical Thinking and Analytical Skills: Students will engage in close reading of film texts and theoretical materials, enabling them to synthesize complex information, formulate original interpretations, and critically evaluate the ideological underpinnings of visual narratives.
- Communication Skills: Students will develop proficiency in articulating nuanced arguments through multiple modalities written essays, oral presentations, and visual analysis. Emphasis will be placed on constructing evidence-based interpretations and communicating them with academic precision.
- Collaborative and Interdisciplinary Teamwork: Film analysis often necessitates diverse perspectives. Students will work in groups to examine films through interdisciplinary lenses (e.g., cultural studies, gender theory, postcolonialism), fostering intellectual dialogue, respect for differing viewpoints, and shared problem-solving.
- Social and Intercultural Responsibility: By analyzing international films and representations of marginalized voices, students will enhance their global awareness, intercultural sensitivity, and civic literacy. They will learn to critically assess how media participates in shaping societal norms and to engage ethically with diverse cultural artifacts.

Ultimately, this course aims to foster a critical, reflective, and globally engaged mode of spectatorship. Students will leave the course not only as more informed viewers but also as culturally aware thinkers capable of interrogating the complex relationships between media, meaning, and society.

預期學習成 By the end of the course, students are expected to:

果 Intended Learning Outcomes (ILOs)

1. Understand film as a cultural and social artifact, and analyze how it represents values, ideologies, and historical contexts across different societies.

2.	Identify and interpret cultural symbols and messages embedded in cinematic narratives, such as representations of gender, race, class, family, and identity.

- 3. Develop cross-cultural awareness and comparative insight, recognizing how similar themes are explored differently across global cultures through film.
- 4. Enhance critical viewing skills and media literacy, by analyzing cinematic techniques such as narrative structure, visual style, sound, symbolism, and directorial perspective.
- 5. Express thoughtful and well-supported cultural critiques in English, through both written assignments and oral presentations, thereby improving academic communication skills in an intercultural context.
